Introduction

The Hogan Development Survey evaluates 11 forms of interpersonal behavior that can cause problems at work and in life. Behaviors associated with elevated HDS scores can be strengths, but when overused can derail relationships and careers. Individuals who understand their performance limitations have more successful careers. This report builds self-awareness by highlighting behavioral tendencies of which Mr. Poole may be unaware.

• The HDS identifies behavioral tendencies that emerge when a person is stressed, bored, or fatigued.
• Research shows that people with lower HDS scores have fewer problems at work. High-risk and moderate-risk scores indicate areas of concern, but low scores indicate underused strengths that also deserve attention.
• The average person has three or four high-risk HDS scores.
• Mr. Poole’s HDS scores should be interpreted in the context of his everyday performance provided by a measure of normal personality, like the Hogan Personality Inventory.

Executive Summary

Based on Mr. Poole's responses to the HDS, when he is not proactively managing and monitoring his behavior, he seems:

• Moody, irritable, easily disappointed with people and projects, and may use emotional displays to make a point.

• Alert for signs of duplicity and betrayal, and may become vengeful when he feels wronged.

• To need a lot of information before making rather conservative decisions.

• Tough, aloof, and indifferent to the feelings of others. He may be a reluctant communicator.

• Cooperative, but may be stubborn when asked to do things that conflict with his personal priorities.

• Unassertive, restrained, and reluctant to step up and take charge.

• Socially appropriate, restrained, and reluctant to take many chances.

• Reluctant to engage in self-promotion or create dramatic situations starring himself.

• Smart, innovative, creative, eccentric, visionary, and sometimes impractical.

• Unconcerned about rules, procedures, and standardized processes, but flexible, adaptable, and able to change directions quickly.

• Independent, even irreverent, and willing to challenge authority and the status quo.
Percentile Scores

The percentile scores indicate the proportion of the population who will score at or below Mr. Poole. For example, a score of 75 on a given scale indicates that Mr. Poole’s score is higher than approximately 75% of the population.

- Scores of 0 to 39 are considered no risk
- Scores of 40 to 69 are considered low risk
- Scores of 70 to 89 are considered moderate risk
- Scores at or above 90 are considered high risk
