Background

Richard is an executive coach and leadership consultant based in London. With an extensive career as an investor in some of the UK’s most successful companies, Richard combines an incisive commercial perspective with his coaching and advisory expertise to deliver great all-round outcomes for clients. He is adept at working with both emerging and established clients, recognising what is needed at different stages of careers and the company lifecycle.

Richard works predominantly in the financial and professional service sectors for blue chip and entrepreneurial organisations that value his unique blend of industry experience, deep technical knowledge and expert coaching and assessment skills.

Prior to qualifying and practicing as an executive coach and leadership consultant, Richard worked for 20 years in the financial services industry. He trained as a Chartered Accountant at PwC before joining Newton, a subsidiary of Bank of New York Mellon, where he was responsible for the investment and commercial leadership of the top performing £3bn UK equity strategies. He also fulfilled a senior management role on the firm’s ExCo where he gained firsthand experience of designing and delivering change across the organisation.
